OPERATIONS

OTIS SMITH GENERAL MANAGER

Otis Smith was promoted to general manager on May 3, 2006. He is responsible for overseeing basketball operations, including player acquisitions via the draft, free agency and trades, player development, scouting and salary cap management. Smith was assistant general manager during the 2005-06 campaign, after serving as director of player development for two seasons.

During the 2005-06 season, Smith played a key role in obtaining Darko Milicic and Carlos Arroyo from Detroit, while also gaining future significant salary cap flexibility by obtaining the expiring contract of Anfernee Hardaway from New York, along with Trevor Ariza, for Steve Francis a week later. He also extended the contracts of Dwight Howard, Jameer Nelson and Tony Battie. Orlando won 16 of its last 22 games of the season, including 12 of its last 13 at home.

Smith spent the 2002-03 season as executive director of basketball operations for the Golden State Warriors. In that role, he oversaw the day-to-day operations of the basketball operations department and worked in conjunction with the players and basketball staff. During the previous two-plus seasons, Smith was director of community relations/Warriors Foundation.

Smith is no stranger to "The City Beautiful." He was a member of the inaugural 1989-90 Magic squad and spent three seasons playing in Orlando (1989-92). Smith averaged 11.4 ppg., 4.1 rpg., 1.9 apg. and 1.01 stlpg. in 195 games with the Magic. He played in 375 career NBA regular season games with Denver, Golden State and Orlando, averaging 10.5 ppg., 3.8 rpg., 1.8 apg. and 1.01 stlpg. in 20.6 minpg.

Following his retirement as a player, Smith served as community relations manager for the Magic for two years. During that time, the organization was presented the Pro Team Community Award, given by the World Sports Humanitarian Hall of Fame. He was also vice president of marketing and community relations of the Boys and Girls Club of Central Florida.

Born and raised in Jacksonville, Florida, and a 1986 graduate of Jacksonville University, he founded the Otis Smith Kids Foundation on October 30, 1989 as a means to improve the quality of life and outlook for the future of deserving Northeast Florida elementary school children. The Foundation provides programs and services to hundreds of disadvantaged children each year in the areas of education, life skills development and personal growth. For nearly 17 years, the not-for-profit organization has touched the lives of thousands of Jacksonville-area children, providing opportunities for children to learn, grow and achieve. For more information on the Foundation, please visit www.otissmithfoundation.com.

DAVE TWARDZIK ASSISTANT GENERAL MANAGER

Dave Twardzik was promoted to assistant general manager of the Magic on June 27, 2005. He had served as director of player personnel for two seasons. He brings more than 31 years of professional basketball experience as a player, coach and front office executive.

Twardzik has worked in a variety of areas with several NBA team's basketball operations departments. He served as general manager of Golden State from 1995-97. Prior to joining the Warriors, he spent five seasons with the Charlotte Hornets, beginning as director of scouting in 1990. He was promoted to director of player personnel in 1991, a position he held until joining Golden State in 1995.

Twardzik has been on the bench as an assistant coach with Indiana (1986-89), the Los Angeles Clippers (1989-90) and Detroit (2000-01). He was a member of Portland's front office from 1981-85 and has also served as a scout for Sacramento (regional/advance scout in 1999-2000; college scout in 2001-02) and Denver (college scout in 1997-99).

Despite being selected with the 26th overall pick of the 1972 NBA Draft by Portland, Twardzik began his professional playing career with the ABA's Virginia Squires. During his four ABA seasons, he averaged 9.0 ppg. and 3.2 apg. and was named an ABA All-Star in 1975.

Following the ABA-NBA merger in 1976, Twardzik joined Portland and helped the Trail Blazers capture the NBA title in 1976-77. During the championship season, Twardzik set a franchise record by hitting 61.2 percent of his field goals. He appeared in 280 career NBA regular season outings with the Trail Blazers, averaging 9.5 ppg., 3.4 apg. and 2.5 rpg., and had his jersey number 13 retired by Portland on October 11, 1981.

A native of Middletown, Penn., Twardzik attended Old Dominion University and was twice named an All-American (1970-71, 1971-72). He and his wife, Kathe, have two children: Monika (30) and Matthew (24).

BRIAN HILL HEAD COACH

Brian Hill returned to Orlando as head coach on May 24, 2005. During the 2005-06 campaign, Hill led the Magic to a 36-46 record. More impressively, Hill guided Orlando to a 16-6 finish, the best in franchise history, including an eight-game winning streak (March 31-April 15, third-longest in team history) and a 12-game home winning streak (March 10-April 15, fourth-longest in team history).

Hill served as head coach of the Magic from 1993-97 and is the most successful coach in franchise history, posting a record of 191-104 (.647) during that span. He also spent two-plus seasons as head coach of the Vancouver Grizzlies (1997-2000) and has an overall head coaching record of 258-273 (.486). Hill's overall record with the Magic is 227-150 (.602).

Hill's extensive coaching resume spans more than 35 years. His NBA career began in 1986, serving as an assistant to Mike Fratello in Atlanta. After four seasons with the Hawks (in which they were 200-128, .609), Hill joined the Orlando Magic as an assistant to Matt Guokas in 1990. After three seasons, he was promoted to head coach on June 30, 1993.

The impact of Hill's promotion was immediate. In his first season, he guided Orlando to a then-team record 50-32 (.610) and a berth into the playoffs for the first time in franchise history. The following season, Hill took the Magic on a ride they will never forget. Orlando went 57-25 (.695), captured the Atlantic Division title and earned a trip to the 1995 NBA Finals. The team's success also translated into individual accolades for Hill, as he was named head coach of the 1995 Eastern Conference All-Star team.

Hill followed up his record-setting season by leading the Magic to a 60-22 (.732) mark in 1995-96, a franchise record that still stands. He also led the Magic to their second consecutive Atlantic Division crown and guided the team to the Eastern Conference Finals, before losing to the eventual NBA Champion Chicago Bulls.

During his three-and-a-half seasons as head coach with the Magic, Hill's teams especially excelled at home. Orlando was 122-26 (.824) at home, including 40 consecutive wins from March 12, 1995 through March 19, 1996. Hill's 167 wins over his first three seasons is third in NBA history during that span, trailing just Phil Jackson (183) and Paul Westphal (177). He also ranks as the seventh-fastest head coach to reach 100 victories, accomplishing the feat in only 149 games. Hill was relieved of his head coaching duties with the Magic on February 18, 1997.

Hill was named head coach of the Vancouver Grizzlies prior to the 1997-98 season. As the third head coach in franchise history, he took over a team that had won just 14 games in 1996-97. The Grizzlies improved by five games under the first year of Hill's leadership. His career with the Grizzlies came to an end 22 games into the 1999-00 season.

Hill spent two seasons (2001-02, 2002-03) as an assistant coach with the New Orleans Hornets. He had served as an assistant on the New Jersey Nets coaching staff since January 2004.

Hill's coaching career also includes high school and 14 years at the collegiate level. He began as an assistant at Montclair State (N.J.) in 1972, and held assistant coaching positions at Lehigh University and Penn State. He was the head coach at Lehigh for eight seasons.

Hill graduated from Kennedy College (Neb.) in 1969, earning a bachelor's degree in physical education while becoming a three-year starter on the basketball team and lettering in track. In addition to his coaching experience, he served as the co-host of "NBA Match-Up" on ESPN during the 2000-01 season.

Since 1996, the Hill family has been active in hosting fundraising events for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Their combined efforts have raised $3 million to help find a cure for CF. In 2003, the Hills were presented with the "Breath of Life" award from The National Cystic Fibrosis Foundation for their contributions toward the battle against this dreaded disease. In March of 2006, the Hills were honored with the prestigious Jefferson Awards for Public Service. The Jefferson Awards for Public Service were established in 1972 by Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, U.S. Senator Robert Taft, Jr. and Sam Beard to create a Nobel Prize for public and community service.

Born on September 19, 1947 in East Orange, New Jersey, Hill and his wife, Kay, have two children: Kimberly and Christopher.

RANDY AYERSASSISTANT COACH

Randy Ayers joined the Magic as an assistant coach on June 10, 2005. He spent six-plus seasons as a member of the Philadelphia 76ers' coaching staff and served as head coach of the Sixers in 2003-04, posting a 21-31 record (.404).

As top assistant under then-coach Larry Brown, Ayers helped guide the 76ers to five consecutive playoff appearances, including a trip to the NBA Finals in 2001. Known for his pressure-defense mindset and up-tempo style, Ayers joined the Sixers as the physical conditioning coach in June 1997 before earning a spot as an assistant coach in July 1998.

Prior to arriving in Philadelphia, Ayers spent eight seasons as head coach at The Ohio State University. He guided the Buckeyes to an overall record of 124-108 (.534), four post-season appearances and back-to-back Big Ten Championships in 1991 and 1992. Ayers was named National Coach of the Year in 1991 by both The Associated Press and Black Coaches Association. He led his 1991 squad to a school-record 27 victories and its first of two conference titles. Ayers received Big Ten Coach of the Year honors in both 1991 and 1992, after directing the Buckeyes to a school-record 15 conference victories in each season.

Ayers spent six years as an assistant coach at Ohio State, including three years under current Maryland head coach Gary Williams and three years under Eldon Miller, before being promoted to head coach in 1989. He arrived in Columbus after two years as an assistant coach at the U.S. Military Academy, where he coordinated the team's recruiting. Prior to his stint at West Point, he spent two years as a graduate assistant at his alma mater, Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

During his coaching career, Ayers has also been involved with USA Basketball. He joined Gene Keady at the 1991 Pan Am Games, where the U.S. team won a bronze medal. During the summer of 1993, Ayers was an assistant to P.J. Carlesimo for Team USA during a European tour. He also served as head coach for the Big Ten All-Star Team during a tour of Japan in June of 1995, a team that posted a perfect 7-0 record, the first time in conference history.

The Ohio Player of the Year as a senior at Springfield North High School, Ayers went on to an impressive collegiate career at Miami (Ohio). A four-year starter and an all-conference performer for the Red Hawks, he finished his career with 1,203 points (11.5 ppg.) and 667 rebounds (6.4 rpg.), leading Miami (Ohio) to back-to-back Mid-American Conference championships in 1977 and 1978 and an NCAA Tournament appearance during his senior season. Ayers is a member of the Hall of Fame at both Springfield North and Miami (OH). He was drafted by the Chicago Bulls in the third round of the 1978 NBA Draft, but was released on the final cut. Prior to starting his coaching career, Ayers played a year of professional basketball for the Reno Bighorns of the Western Basketball Association (WBA) and was named to the WBA All-Star Team as a second team selection.

Ayers also participated in the NBA's Basketball Without Borders program in September of 2006 in Johannesburg, South Africa, assisting in a basketball instructional camp for young people that also promotes friendship, healthy living and education with an emphasis on HIV/AIDS awareness and prevention.

Born on April 16, 1956, Ayers graduated from Miami (Ohio) in 1978 with a degree in education and later earned his master's of education degree in 1981. A native of Springfield, Ohio, he and his wife, Carol, have two sons, Ryan (20) and Cameron (15). Ryan is a member of the basketball team at the University of Notre Dame.

JOHN KUESTERASSISTANT COACH

John Kuester brings 16 years of NBA coaching experience to the Magic. He was hired as an assistant coach on July 6, 2006. During the 2005-06 campaign, he was an assistant coach for the Philadelphia 76ers.

For six seasons (1997-2003), Kuester was a member of the Sixers' coaching staff under then-coach Larry Brown, helping guide them to the NBA Finals in 2001. He would re-join Brown's staff in Detroit as an assistant coach, helping the Pistons capture the 2004 NBA World Championship. Kuester was also an assistant coach with New Jersey in 2004-05 and spent seven seasons (1990-97) with the Boston Celtics, including two as an assistant coach from 1995-97.

Kuester began his coaching career as a volunteer assistant at the University of Richmond in 1980-81. He then served as an assistant coach at Boston University for two seasons (1981-83). In 1983, Kuester became the youngest Division I head coach, succeeding Rick Pitino at Boston University. After two seasons with the Terriers (1983-85), Kuester was the head coach at George Washington University from 1985-90.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina, Kuester played four seasons with the Tar Heels under Dean Smith from 1973-77. He helped UNC capture two Atlantic Coast Conference championships and reach the NCAA Tournament four times, including the NCAA Finals in 1977. During his senior year, Kuester was voted the team's best defensive player for the second straight season and the Most Valuable Player of both the ACC Tournament and the NCAA East Regionals.

Kuester was selected in the third round (53rd overall) by the Kansas City Kings in the 1977 NBA Draft. He played three seasons in the NBA, one each with Kansas City, Denver and Indiana.

Born on February 6, 1955, Kuester and his wife, Tricia, have a son, John III, and a daughter, Katelyn.

TOM STERNERASSISTANT COACH

Tom Sterner returned to Orlando as an assistant coach for the Magic. He was rehired on June 10, 2005. Sterner originally joined the organization in June of 1989 and was an assistant coach for nine seasons (1994-2002). He also served as the top assistant coach for the Golden State Warriors from 2002-04.

Sterner's coaching responsibilities have included detailed game and opponent preparation, as well as individual player development. While the top assistant in Golden State, he helped the Warriors improve on both ends of the court. In 2003-04, with Sterner acting as 'defensive coordinator,' Golden State was the most improved defensive team in the NBA, allowing 9.6 fewer points per game than the previous season. He was in charge of the team's offense in 2002-03. The Warriors ranked second in the league in scoring that season, averaging 102.4 points per game.

Sterner served as an assistant coach for the Eastern Conference during the 1995 NBA All-Star Game held in Phoenix and helped the Magic reach the playoffs five times, including its run to the 1995 NBA Finals. Sterner has also served as head coach of both Orlando's and Golden State's summer league teams during his career.

Prior to his promotion as assistant coach in September of 1994, Sterner served as the Magic's video scout for four seasons. He served as chairman of the NBA Technology and Scouting Committee from 1994-2004 and was instrumental in the development of the Coaches' Tools software currently used by NBA teams for scouting purposes. He has consulted with companies such as IBM, IDS, Avid Technologies and XOS Technologies.

During his first tenure in Orlando, Sterner directed all aspects of the team's NBA advanced scouting preparation. He also developed and directed the Orlando Magic Youth Camp program, which features camps throughout the state of Florida and as far north as Grand Rapids, Michigan. Sterner continues to conduct basketball clinics nationally and internationally.

Sterner served as assistant coach/director of player personnel for the Tampa Bay Sun Blasters of the United States Basketball League during the summer of 1992. His responsibilities included drafting and signing of players, as well as coaching the team.

From 1987-90, Sterner served as assistant coach at Franklin & Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa. While at F&M, the Diplomats achieved a 76-12 record, won three straight Middle Atlantic Coast Conference Championships, made three NCAA postseason tournament appearances and had the distinction of being the #1 Division III team in the nation as voted by the Associated Press.

Prior to F&M, Sterner spent six years as head coach at Lancaster (Pa.) Catholic High School, where his team participated in several district and state competitions. He also assisted the Philadelphia 76ers for eight years during their veteran's camp.

Born on November 17, 1956, Sterner earned his undergraduate degree in elementary education from Millersville (Pa.) State College and his master's degree in sports administration and computers from Temple University. He and his wife, Marcia, have two daughters, Malorie and Paige.

MARK BRYANT

ASSISTANT COACH/PLAYER DEVELOPMENT

Mark Bryant was named assistant coach/player development of the Magic on July 5, 2005. He spent the 2004-05 season with Dallas as a member of its player development staff.

Bryant spent 15 seasons as a player in the NBA with 10 different teams from 1988-2003. He appeared in 797 regular season games during his NBA career with Portland, Houston, Phoenix, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, San Antonio, Philadelphia, Denver and Boston, averaging 5.4 ppg. and 3.8 rpg. in 16.9 minpg. Bryant also appeared in 79 career playoff games, averaging 3.5 ppg. and 2.5 rpg. in 12.2 minpg.

Originally selected by Portland in the first round (21st overall) of the 1988 NBA Draft, Bryant helped the Blazers reach the NBA Finals in 1990 and 1992. The 6-9 forward averaged 20.5 ppg. and 9.1 rpg. as a senior (1987-88). He was a First Team All-Big East selection that season and led Seton Hall to its first-ever berth into the NCAA Tournament.

Born on April 25, 1965, Bryant majored in psychology and minored in communications while at Seton Hall. He and his wife, Shelley, have two sons, Taige and Poe.

MORLON WILEY

ASSISTANT COACH/PLAYER DEVELOPMENT

One of the original members of the Magic, Morlon Wiley enters his third season on the Magic bench as an assistant coach/player development. He was originally named assistant coach on August 12, 2004. Wiley spent the previous four seasons (2000-04) with Dallas as part of the player development staff in the Mavericks' basketball operations department.

Originally a second round choice (46th overall) by Dallas in the 1988 NBA Draft, Wiley played in 295 regular season games during his NBA career with Dallas, Orlando, San Antonio, Atlanta and Miami, averaging 3.7 ppg., 2.4 apg. and 1.2 rpg. in 13.0 minpg.

Wiley was a member of the inaugural Magic squad back in 1989-90 and was the first player ever signed by Orlando on June 29, 1989. He appeared in 83 total games with the Magic (1989-91), averaging 4.4 ppg. and 2.4 apg.

Born on September 24, 1966, Wiley and his wife, Stacey, have one son, Jeremiah, who is six.

SCOTT HERRING

VICE PRESIDENT OF BASKETBALL ADMINISTRATION

Scott Herring begins his 19th year with the Orlando Magic. He became vice president of basketball administration in July of 2005. Herring also served as assistant general manager for more than four years.

Herring is responsible for handling the organization's salary cap and player contract issues. This includes projections and strategy formulation related to trades, free agents and player signings, as well as drafting player contracts and other collective bargaining issues. He is also responsible for all business issues within the basketball operations department.

Herring previously served the Orlando Magic as the vice president of finance/administration/information technology and the senior director of finance. In his previous role, he was responsible for all accounting and finance operations including budgeting, financial reporting and tax reporting. He also oversaw all information technology issues and the administration functions. Those responsibilities encompassed all RDV Sports entities.

Prior to joining the Magic, Herring gained seven years of experience working with CPA firms in Naples, Fla. and Youngstown, Ohio. Herring is a Certified Public Accountant and graduated from Grove City College. He is a native of Greensburg, Penn.

Herring resides in Maitland, Fla., with his wife, Debbie, and three sons, Brett (17), Sean (16) and Kendall (14).

TOM SMITH

ATHLETIC TRAINER

Tom Smith was named head athletic trainer of the Orlando Magic on July 5, 2006. He had spent the previous six seasons as assistant athletic trainer for the Atlanta Hawks.

With Atlanta, Smith assisted to the training needs of the players, in addition to handling the team's travel arrangements. Prior to joining the Hawks, Smith was the head athletic trainer at St. Paul Academy in St. Paul, Minnesota for six years (1994-2000).

Smith's career in athletic training began as a graduate student trainer with the Minnesota Timberwolves for the 1990-91 season. From 1992-95, he served as head athletic trainer and travel coordinator for the Rapid City Thrillers of the CBA. Smith then worked one season (1995-96) with the IHL's Minnesota Moose, in addition to his responsibilities at St. Paul Academy.
